

Of the Moon and the Sun

To my love, my all, my very self
A lofty word and vowels display
Just a few words today
While I sit here alone in bed,
And of thoughts in my head.

For long, I have waited and searched for your person and soul.
For long, I have cowered away in some distant corner waiting for your hand.
For long, I knew that you would appear and our love would sincerely manifest.
For long, it was a dream and an aspiration.

This day and yesterday, we have been a witness to that imagined screenplay.
This day and yesterday, we have shared moments that make dreams
This day and yesterday, we have shared words of the wise and the poets
This day and yesterday, we have shared the elements of our hearts and our hopes.
This day and yesterday, we have learned the enthusiastic will persists in our devotion and yearns for more. .
This day and yesterday, the warmth of the sun and the mystery of the moon orbit about us.

In the west, the sun sets upon the Earth and calls upon its neighbor on the far side to take its place.
On the horizon of the east,
the pastel moon hovers over the landscape and echoes its light across the snowy prairies and rolling hills.
A star studded and dark sky secures its embrace of the heavens.
The night has fallen and dreams evolve in the sleep.

I have found myself in you. I have found a future in you. I have found love in you. I have found you in me.
Our paths were meant to cross and intertwined they continuously blend.
Our paths were meant to be together in life and design.
The stars above remind us of our place, that beside each other.
The stars above us show us that our relationship will continue to burn and to shine:
To shine on during the darkest and cloudiest of days.
We are the stars, and the heavens unite around us.
The moon beckons to reflect the light gleaming from our souls.

The morning moon steps off its pedestal in the west
As the sun strides over the eastern skyline,
Its warmth and colors blaze forth in glorious reprise.
Its light awakens the earth and calls out a new day to begin.
As the sun rises, the birds are in flight and they are singing to honor the newborn day.
To reveal yet another day of wonder and possibility,
We have grown and today and tomorrow we shall continue to grow.

Oh! to sing with the choirs of angels in praise and joy of our union, our smiles, our touch, and our voices.
God has touched our love and blessed it with his loving grace.
Our souls stretch out to each other and find their place in each other.
Our souls spread and enlighten we feel.
Immersed in your being am I as you are in me.
A hostile world grows quiet and sighs of relief in witness and testimony to our love.
Forever in this day and more, I am graced and calmed by you.
Forever in this day and more, I love you and you love me.
Forever in this day and more, anxiously we await the next time we are to receive each other's hold.
To be in each other's arms like we never left them
To renew the sincere hearts that pound in our breasts.

What we have learned today and yesterday ignites the fire that burns for tomorrow.

What we have learned is that our lives are forever altered.
What we have learned is that our lives are fortunate with grand thoughts of our glazed union.
What we have learned is that a void appears in the absence of each other.
What we have learned is that love truly exists and dwells in our midst.

Our feelings, Our thoughts, and our instincts reveal to us the pureness of our harmony.
It is our very selves that we hear when we speak of love.
It is our very selves that we see when we hold each other oh so tight.
It is our very selves that we feel when we are inside.

It is fate, and life, that things grow, bloom, and die.
It is fate, and life, that in death there is more life.
It is fate, and life, that our souls have blended, grown, and bloomed.
It is fate, and life, God blesses our thoughts and grants our love with life.
It is us, soul-mates, friendships, internal and eternal

I walk along the clouds and wave at the sun when I speak of you
The threshold of heaven's seventh ring awaits our entrance.
Nothing else matters; nothing even compares to you.
Much adversity we have seen in the past
Much adversity lies in the path; some seen and some not.
Worlds collide and unite in the some foreign plight along our course.
By your side and you beside me, nothing will prevent our destiny.
The moon and sun motion the days that revolve around us.
For my thoughts here are real and as well are yours.

Let us walk together some more.
Let us sit together by the rock we have carried and laid.
Let us go forth and build upon this integrity and foundation.
Let us be what we are, never to give up nor to let go.
Let us be what we will be.